With so many projects and programs, how do you measure the impact of a community initiative? How do you measure the collective work of a coalition and its partners?

In this workshop, participants will learn to assess the progress and impact of the community change making process as a whole. The various levels and processes involved in evaluation will be discussed as well as how to identify which questions to ask to build an effective evaluation plan. Participants will walk away with the basic skills and concepts to create an evaluation plan for their community initiative.
